Meeting with the Perezes

Last week, on our way to a Michigan meeting, we swung by the temporary farm home of Archie and Ruth Perez in Indiana. Many of you will remember that Micki and I have been praying about the possibility of working with them upon our arrival in Uruguay. After enjoying Ruth’s delicious home-cooked meal and fellowship around the table, we talked more about our philosophy of and plans for the ministry. Archie is a man with a good library, but he also takes reaching his community seriously. The leadership he envisions for the Colonia Institute will be committed to biblical study, but will also actively be involved in reaching Colonia, Uruguay, and the world with the Gospel. Should the Lord continue to lead them and us in the direction of working together, Micki and I will have oversight of the institute (she with the secretarial aspects; I with teaching and organization). Though Archie would like to speak more with the Colonia church about this possibility in order to honor their authority, we are praising the Lord for open doors! They also gave us lots of helpful advice in planning our move.

Missions at Home

We have begun a Bible study with a Hispanic couple we met in Calvary Baptist Church’s ESL class. The husband, especially, seems to need patient instruction. You can pray that we discern their spiritual condition and meet their needs through the Gospel. As well, Calvary is hosting a men’s and women’s outreach night next week. Two of our neighbors said they will join me, and two of Micki’s friends said they will join her. We are praying for first-fruits!

Webpage and Facebook

Every good missionary knows that his work is 70% heart and 30% marketing. Actually, we do not believe that! Still, we want to provide ways for you to keep up with us. So, please note the minor change in our web address from “rehfeldtinuruguay” (singular Rehfeldt) to www.rehfeldtsinuruguay.com (plural Rehfeldts). We also have a Facebook page called “Jon and Micki Rehfeldt.” Feel free to like us...I’m still trying to think of a pyramid scheme to encourage many likes and build our support base. Ha! Our actual committed support base is hovering around 70%. We hope to be fully supported in a year or less.
